

Oxford TRANSFORM

Raising aspirations and fulfilling potential

Britain has a deep social mobility problem, and it is getting worse for a generation of young people. As the highest ranked university in the world, the University of Oxford has a responsibility to ensure that the most talented young people from all backgrounds have the opportunity to fulfil their potential.

Our vision is for the most talented young people, regardless of background, postcode or circumstance, to succeed in school, at university, and in their future lives.

Our mission is to create a transformational national fund that supports students, schools, communities and families across the country. We want to make a meaningful contribution to young people's lives, raising attainment and aspiration across the UK.

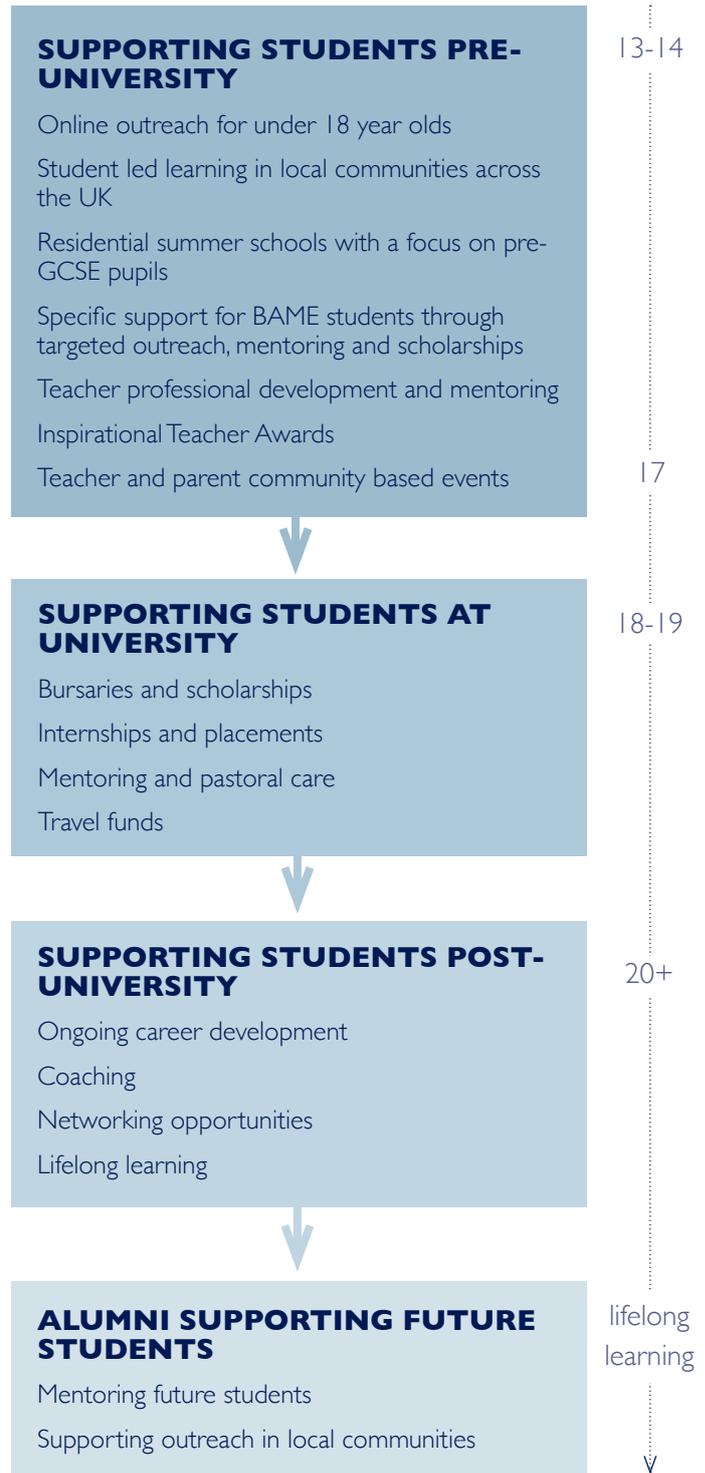

What is Oxford Transform?

Oxford Transform is the University of Oxford's national campaign to raise funds to enable and encourage more bright young people from all backgrounds to study at the best universities in the country and be supported financially throughout their studies.

Who are we helping?

The University is supporting young people from primary-school age through to A-Level and post-school options, encouraging them to aspire to higher education, and to obtain a place at Oxford. This ambitious and expanding network of national outreach activity focuses on hard-to-reach young people from regions in the UK that are under-represented at Oxford.

How are we helping?

How can you help?

The University assigns £6 million a year to guarantee scholarship support to all UK/EU students from families with a low household income, and over £1 million a year to support widening access and participation, but there is still more that needs to be done. With the prospect of tuition fees rising and funding for higher education by the UK government and the EU decreasing, the University is concerned it will not be able to guarantee this support in perpetuity. Our fundraising effort has been transformed by a landmark donation of £75 million from Sir Michael Moritz and Ms Harriet Heyman. Their investment currently supports a generous scholarship and reduced tuition fee for students whose household income is less than £16,000.

We are committed to creating an endowment to support widening access, participation and undergraduate scholarships, with an initial target of £10 million by July 2018.

We would like to request your generous philanthropic support and investment to transform the lives of exceptional young people today, and for future generations. Thank you.
